

Fridge Organization Map

A place for everything — where each food stays freshest.

Fridges aren't the same temperature all over. Store each food in its ideal zone to cut waste and keep things fresh.

Inside the Fridge — Top to Bottom

warmest → coldest

Top Shelf

Leftovers, drinks & ready-to-eat

Most stable temp. Cooked food, leftovers, herbs, packaged snacks and drinks. Nothing that needs the deepest cold.

Middle Shelf

Dairy & eggs

Milk, yogurt, cheese, butter for daily use and eggs (in their carton) — steady cold keeps dairy at its best.

Lower Shelf

Meal prep & grab-and-go

Batch-cooked meals, portioned lunches and marinating dishes at eye level so they get eaten first.

Bottom Shelf

Raw meat, poultry & fish

The coldest zone. Keep on the lowest shelf on a tray so drips can't reach food below. Sealed until you cook.

Crisper Drawers

Produce — split by humidity

High humidity (vent closed): leafy greens, herbs, broccoli. Low humidity (vent open): apples, pears, ripening fruit.

The Door

Why It Matters

Set it to 37 °F (3 °C). Cold enough to slow spoilage, not so cold food freezes.

Leave room to breathe. Air needs to circulate — a packed fridge cools unevenly.

Bin it up. Clear bins group like items and pull out for easy cleaning.

Front row = eat first. Put the oldest items up front so nothing hides and spoils.

5-Minute Weekly Cleanout

before grocery day

- ☐ Toss anything past its use-by date
- ☐ Move soon-to-expire food to the front
- ☐ Wipe spills & sticky shelf spots
- ☐ Rinse produce drawers, dry well
- ☐ Consolidate half-empty jars & bottles
- ☐ Jot leftovers to eat this week

Set Up a Meal-Prep Zone

grab-and-go

Keep one clear bin for portioned lunches and snacks you can grab without thinking.

Store cut fruit & veggies in view at eye level — visible produce actually gets eaten.

Label meal-prep containers with the date made so nothing lingers too long.

Reserve a shelf edge for a "use me first" tray of leftovers and open items.

An organized fridge isn't about perfection — it's about seeing what you have, so good food gets eaten instead of forgotten.
